night by the production of a three act play, "The Invisible Husband," adapted from the French sees as achieved last night by Mr. Bourcleauti, Wr. Go not remember any other piece of equal length which from first one one stage most skilfully by Mr. Bourcleauti, Wr. Go not remember any other piece of equal length which from first on the se completely keeps the attention of the andience risibily excited. It was capitally acted all through. The curtain fell amid many salvox of a pplause, and all agreed a prodictions hit was made.

This really popular place of atmosement proceeds steadily from triumph to triumph. We have recently recorded the success of "Tast and Present," with the truly splendid acting of Mr. Blake, and now we have to record another brillians success in "The Invisible Husband," played last might for the first time, with capital parts for everybody. Three first rade advantages are enjoyed by this piece. The original is by Scribe, the adaptation by Bourcleauti, and the piece is played by the best company in America. It is a model of a chianced, as wallands a theatre. With a skill which unks publy cannot be imitated. Messrs. Scribe and Bourcleauti convert every thought into a situation. Yet, while based on an improbable incident, the plot appears to be natural and simple. The play is brilliantly writien, and its natural hands in the stage with excellent care by Mr. Lester. The scenery is effective, the costumes brilliant. The drama was in every respect acted to perfection, and its success most hearty and descreed.
